crossing the Point Neuf at the moment when a porter belonging to the Bank of France, pretty well tired of the weight he carried, (it was a bag containing nine belonging to the Bank of France, pretty well tired of the weight he carried, (it was a bag containing nine thousand francs in silver.) stopped to rest himself by leaning against the parapet wall of the bridge; but at the mexicut that he did so, his valuable load, either from awkwardness or carelessness slipped out of his hands, and fell into the Seine, which is very deep just in that Never shall I forget his look of despair. He made a maxement as if to jump over, and I believe would have effected his purpose, but for the presence of mind of a girl—a little delicate looking thing of about sixteen, a violet seller, who, clasping her arms around him, cried for help, which in an instant was afforded.

Myself and some others seized him; he struggled with as desperately. "Let me go, let me go," cried he, "I am ruined for ever. My wife, my children, what will

A multitude of voices were raised at once, some to console, others to inquire; but above the rest were heard the clear and silver tones of the violet girl, "My friend, have patience, you have lost nothing." "Nothing! Oh, heavens!" "No, no, I tell you no. Let some one run for the divers. There is no doubt they will saccoed in bringing it up." "She is right," resounded from a number of voices, and from mine among the rest and in an instant half a dozen people ran to fetch the

Those who remained exerted themselves as well as Those who remained exerted themselves as well as they could to solace the poor porter. One brought him a small glass of liquor; another a little brandy; a third some can de Cologne; and four or five presented the grand specific, sugar and water. The little violet girl had been before all the rest in administering a cordial, and perhaps her's was the most efficacious—a glass of pure water, which she held to his trembling lips, and made him swallow.

"Drink," she criest, "drink it up. It will do you

Whether it was the water, or the kind and sympathe

Whether it was the water, or the kind and sympathetic manner with which it was offered, that relieved him, I know not, but certainly one of the two had its effect, for his looks grew less wild—he burst into a passionate fit of weeping, and, by degrees, became composed enough to make his acknowledgments to the spectators, who had shown such interest in his misfortuse.

The divers soon came, and one of them descended without loss of time. Never did I witness such intense anxiety as the search excited; if the fate of every one present had hung upon the success, they could not have estified greater interest in it. He soon reappeared, bringing up, not the bag of silver, but a small iron box.—It was instantly broken open, and found to be full of twenty franc pieces, in gold: they were quickly counted, and found to amount to nearly twelve thousand francs; about four hundred and fifty poands sterling. There about found to amount to hearly week the strong about four hundred and fifty posseds sterling. There were three divers, who, overjoyed at their good fortune, speedily divided the prize among themselves; and directly afterward another descended in search of the porter's bag.

This sime he returned with it in triumsh. The poor

This time he returned with it in triumph. The fellow could scarcely speak when it was put into his bands. On coming to himself, he cried with vehemence, fellow could scarcely speak when it was put into his hands. On coming to himself, he cried with vehemence, "Heaven reward you! you knew not what good you have done. I am the father of five children. I was for rerly in good circumstances, but a series of misfortunes reduced me to the greatest distress. All that I had left was an irreproachable character, and that procured for me my present situation; I have had it but a week. Today I should without your help, have lost it. My wife, my children, would have been exposed to all the horrors of want; they would have been deprived of a husband and a father; for never, no never, could I have survived the ruin I had brought upon them! It is you who have saved us all; heaven will reward you."

While he thus spoke, he rummaged in his pockets, and drew out some francs. "This is all I have, tis very little; but tell me where you live, and tomerrow—"Not a farthing," interrupted they, with one voice; and one of them added, "step a bit, let me talk to my comrades." They stepped aside for a moment: I followed them with my eyes, and saw that they listened to their companion with emotion. "We are all of a mind," said he, returning with them; "yes, my friend, if we have been serviceable to you, you also have caused our good fortune; it seems to me tha; we ought to share with you what heaven sent us through you means. My companions think so no, and we are going to divide it with you what heaven sent us through your means. My companions think so too, and we are going to divide it companions think so too, and we are going to distinct four equal shares."

The porter would have remonstrated, but his voice was drowned by the acclamations of the spectators.—
"Generous fellows!"—"Much good may it do you!"—
"The same luck to you!"—resounded from every mouth.
There was not one present but seemed as happy as if he or she were about to participate in the contents of the box. The money was divided, and in spite of his excuses, the porter was forced to take his share.

The generous divers went their way, the crowd began

The generous divers went their way, the crowd began to disperse; but the porter still lingered, and I had the curiosity to remain, in order to watch his motions. He approached the little violet girl. "Ah, my dear," cried he, "what do I not owe to you? but for you it had been all over with me. My wife, my little ones, must thank you." 'Ma foi! it is not worth mentisning. Would you have me stand by and see you drown yourself?"—
"But your courage, your strength—could one have expected it from so young a girl?" "Ah! there is no want of strength where there is good will." "And no body ever had more of that. Give me six of your bouquets, my dear; my children are so fond of violets, and they never have prized any as they will do these."

She twisted a bit of thread round six of her fairy nosegays, and presented them to him. He deposited them carefully in his bosom, and slipped something into her hand; then, without waiting to hear her acknowledgments, which she began to pour forth, took to his heels as if his bag had been made of feathers.

The girl leoked after him with pleasure sparkling in her eyes. "What will you take for the rest of your nosegays!" said I, going up to her. "Whatever you please to give me," cried she, with vivacity; "for that good man's money will burn my pocket till I get home to give it to my morther. Oh! how giad will she be to good man's money will burn my pocket till I get home to give it to my mother. Oh! how glad will she be to have all that, and still more so when she knows why it has been given me." The reader will easily believe has been given me." The reader will easily believe that my purchase was speedily made; the good girl's purse was something heavier for it; and I had the pleasure of thinking that I contributed, in a small degree, to reward the goodness of heart which she had so mequivocally displayed. She hastened home with her little treasure, and I to my lodging, to put the violets into water, promising myself, as I did so, to be a frequent customer to the little nosegay girl of the Point Neuf.

THE TOUCH OF THE DEVIL .- Chateaubriand, in his THE TOUCH OF THE DEVIL.—Chateaubriand, in his work on English literature, speaks of sitting, when he was a young man, next MIRABEAU, at a dinner, while the subject of conversation was Mirabeau's enemies. "He looked me full in the face," says Chateaubriand, with his eyes of wickedness and genius, and laying his broad hand on my shoulder, said, "they will never forgive me my superiority." Methinks I still feel the impression of that hand, as if Satan had touched me with his fary claw."—Free Trader.

DR. S. PHINNEY'S ANTI-DYSPEPTIC AND ANTI-BILIOUS PILLS.—The proprieter of this article, several years since offered to the public, feels confident an apology will be found for so doing, from having witnessed, in the course of many years practice, the injurious effects of drastic, purgative needleines, as a common family pill, indescriminately used by those engaged in literary pursuits, of sedentary habits, and especially feeble, delicate females. The character of these pills for superior mildness, tproducing none of the evils of the medicines above referred to.) has been long established; and the proprietor has the satisfaction of finding very many medical men of the first standing is the community, as well as others, who can duly appreciate them, lending their aid in bringing the article isto general ase, as will be seen by the names subjoined to this article.

Dr. Phinney would refer to some of the mast respectable individuals in the country, who have used these Pills in their families for many years, and highly approve of them. The following letter Dr. Phinney received from Benjamin Knower, Esq., of Albany, several years since.

Having suffered for some time with indigestion and flatulency, I-was advised to try Dr. S. Phinney's Anti-Dyspeptic or Billious Pills, and after using them for some time, ann prepared to say that they are the mildest and most efficacious in their operation, of any article of the kind I have ever used; and what I esteem of great importance, they occasion no sickness at the stomach, procuring full, free, and satisfactory discharges, and leaving the bewels in a natural condition. And I the more cheerfully recommend their use to all who are of billious habits, or need an excellent family medicine, in consideration of the high standing of the proprietor, in the community, as a medical man.

TO A CARD.—To the Ladies of New York.—A new thing expressly manufactured for the ladies at GREGORY's wholesale and retail Confectionary Store, No. 131 William street, N. York, and is sold, wholesale or retail, by no other person in the city. VANILLA Cream Candy, a new, very rich, and delicious article, is now hereby submitted to the judgment and patronage of the New York citizens, and the public in general, and especially the ladies, who are said to be the best judges of the sweets of life; and as a sweet without a bitter, the Vanilla Gream Candy stands pre-eminent.

N. B. On hand, and constantly manufacturing, a general assortment of Candies for the South and Western markets, at the lowest wholesale price, and warranted to keep in any climate. No charge for boxes, packing, or cartage to any part of the city.

mate. No charge for boxes, packing, or cartage to any part of the city.

LT JOSEPH R. SPENCER having completed the arrangements attendant on opening his Hat Warehouse, is now prepared to furnish a superb article of the style now in general use among the genteel community, and possessing the increased value of capacity for more lengthened service, at the standard price, namely, five doillars.

As a guide to those who may favor him with their patronage, he would present the following rules, which will invariably govern his business.

Firstly. The hats sold at his establishment will be of the same value, though differing in shape and general appearance.

Secondly. The very moderate price demanded not warranting a system of credit, all isades must be subjected to cash payments.

He has also added to his stock a choice selection of Umbrelias Canes, Gloves, Handkerchiefs, Toilet Brushes, &c.

The sales room, which is fitted up in a style commensurate with the growing taste and refinement of the city, is located at the corner of Wall and New streets, being a part of the building about to be occupied by the Courier and Enquirer.

Berlin Grates — These superb castings, equalling in finish the finest metal, are ornamented with rich and chaset designs, executed in bas relief. They are colored by a new process, not acted upon by heat or rust, and requiring water only to keep them clean.

The Reflecting Grate, recently introduced, unites beauty and economy, being constructed with brilliant metallic reflectors to throw into the room a large portion of the heat which ordinarity escapes through the flue.

Doric and Minerva Fire Places—This well established article is known to the public 2s one superior to any thing now in use for burning coal, as it combines all the advantages of both the usual modes of communicating heat by radiation, as in the common grate and fire place, and by transmission, as in close staves. It diffuses warmth throughout the rooms by means of heatest air, which, by the construction of the Daric Fire Place, is not permitted to come in contact with heated iroo plates, which is well known to have the effect of destroying the oxygen of the atmosphere, rendering it often oppressive, and always injurious to the health. It is portable, a convenience easily appreciated, as they can be removed at pleasure. It is adapted to the parlor, the warehouse, and the caunting room, uniting the comfort of an open fire with perfect safety and convenience. For safe by

BROWN & CO.'S ONE PRICE HAT

STORE.—The subscribers, since the year 1824, have asimed at furnishing the public with an elegant and substantial HAT of the most graceful form, at the accommodating price of $3. They can sow say that their efforts have been crowned with triumphant success. The Hats musufactured by them during the last three months, surpass in beauty and finish any heretofore offered, and stand pre-eminent among those of higher prices, worn by the fashionable world. To their patrons they would say—the quality, as far as may be, is unitorm—the price moderate and fixed—the profit small, and all the sales for cash. 178 Ckatham Square, cor. Mett st.
